|               | Please reconsider this application England has lost most of its orchards in the last 50 years and we do not understand fully the impact this has on our biodiversity. Surely imaginative planning can retain it and increase the value of the homes by making it a feature. All new homes should have fruit trees planted in the gardens by the builder/landscaper as they did in the 1930's. Please don't bulldoze and call the development 'The Orchard'. |
